An impartial hearing is a well-known and well-established procedure under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). However, the corresponding procedural safeguard under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act (§ 504), although a clearly established right, is not well known. Moreover, its institutional implementation is subject to question.

The purpose of this article is to synthesize, as a set of practice pointers, the limited legal sources specific to impartial hearings under § 504, such as *52 letters of findings from the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR). The primary thrust of the practice pointers is for school districts in relation to so-called “§ 504–only” students, as contrasted with those also covered under the IDEA definition of disability, although other individuals and organizations may also find this information beneficial.

- The district, as the recipient of federal funds, has this legal obligation.
- In fulfilling this obligation, check carefully the availability of the state's IDEA impartial hearing system.
- This right, along with the other § 504 procedural safeguards, extends to child find, i.e., students reasonably suspected of meeting the § 504 eligibility standards.
- Make sure that you provide the requisite procedural safeguards notice, which includes the parents' right for an impartial hearing under § 504, upon each action regarding identification, evaluation, or educational placement.
- Do not confuse the regulatory requirement for a grievance procedure with that for an impartial hearing under § 504. More over, do not require use of the grievance procedure as a prerequisite for obtaining a § 504 hearing.
- Provide a reasonable period for filing for the hearing.
- Do not unilaterally determine that the issues have been resolved, thus denying the parent's request and right to a hearing.
- Make sure that the hearing officer meets the applicable standards for impartiality:
  - not an employee of the school district
  - not an employee of another district that shares a contract for special education services
  - not an individual that otherwise has a personal or professional conflict of interest
  - not an individual who has participated in the formulation of state policy concerning students with disabilities.
• Although the IDEA procedural requirements for the hearing is one means of complying with § 504, they serve as an optimum model rather than a required minimum. For example, the hearing may, not must, meet the IDEA requirements, such as the rights of cross-examination (as compared with follow-up questions) and a transcript (as compared with a tape recording).

• Make sure that the hearing is scheduled and completed within a reasonable period of time.

• Make sure to include an outside “review procedure” for the hearing decision.

• Be very careful, consulting with local legal counsel, about the relationship with the exhaustion requirement for IDEA hearings.

34 C.F.R. § 104.36 (“Compliance with the procedural safeguards of [the IDEA] is one means of meeting [the § 504 procedural safeguards] requirement”).
See, e.g., the commentary accompanying the § 504 regulations. 42 Fed. Reg. 22,676, 22,691 (May 4, 1977); see also 45 Fed. Reg. 30,946, 30,953 (May 9, 1980). For the use of the IDEA by way of analogy, see, e.g., Letter to Anonymous, 18 IDELR 230 (OCR 1991):
OCR adheres to a standard of fundamental fairness and looks to case law and other decisions under the IDEA for guidance in interpreting what is reasonable. For example, there may not be undue delays in convening hearings and rendering decisions. In deciding what is reasonable, OCR examines timelines for state hearings under the IDEA. While specific requirements of the IDEA or state law are not applied automatically, they serve to guide our determination of reasonableness.

See, e.g., Houston (Tex.) Indep. Sch. Dist., 25 IDELR 163 (OCR 1996). However, where a district opts for the IDEA procedures for the hearing, it must comply with them. See, e.g., Miami–Dade Cnty. (FL) Sch. Dist., 52 IDELR ¶ 53 (OCR 2008).

See supra notes 18–19 and accompanying text. For applications of this general reasonableness standard, see, e.g., Griffith (Ind.) Pub. Sch., 41 IDELR ¶ 157 (OCR 2003); Middleton–Cross Plains (Wis.) Sch. Dist., 17 IDELR 1497 (OCR 1990); Ga. Dept. of Educ., 17 IDELR 472 (OCR 1990).

The district may not have a role in the final outcome of the hearing other than deciding whether to appeal it according to the review procedure. See, e.g., Helms v. McDaniel, 657 F.2d 800 (5th Cir. 1981).

34 C.F.R. § 104.36. The second tier (i.e., review officer level) in states that have a two–tier IDEA system is not necessary. See, e.g., Miss. State Dept of Educ., 352 IDELR 279 (OCR 1986); In re Student with a Disability, 116 LRP 2576 (N.Y. SEA 2015). However, its use for this purpose is permissible. See, e.g., Pa. Dept of Educ., 19 IDELR 1105 (OCR 1993). However, the specific contours of the review procedure, when it is not the second tier, are subject to question, at least for districts. See, e.g., J.D. v. Georgetown Indep. Sch. Dist., 57 IDELR ¶ 36 (W.D. Tex. 2011) (commenting that “a vague reference to ‘a review procedure’ in an implementing regulation cannot by itself create federal jurisdiction”); Bd. of Educ. of Howard Cnty. v. Smith, 43 IDELR ¶ 84 (D. Md. 2005) (observing that “this review procedure is not necessarily mandated in federal court”).
