This article was originally published in the Journal of the National Administrative Law Judiciary in 2018. This updated version, as of June 1, 2022 shows the additions in yellow highlighting.

This updated question-and-answer document is specific to impartial hearing officers (IHOs) and the hearings that they conduct under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).¹ The coverage does not extend to the alternate third-party dispute decisional mechanism under the IDEA, the complaint resolution process (CRP) except to the extent that this alternative mechanism intersects with IHO issues.² Similarly, the scope only extends secondarily to the IHO's remedial authority, which is the subject of separate comprehensive coverage.³ The sources are largely limited to the pertinent IDEA legislation and regulations, court decisions, and the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Special Education's (OSEP) policy letters.⁴ Thus, the answers are subject to revision or Although OSEP policy letters do not have the binding effect on IHOs of either the IDEA or, within their jurisdictions, court decisions, they provide a nationally applicable interpretation that courts often find persuasive. See, e.g., Perry A. The author welcomes corrections and additions from interested parties so that the document is as accurate, comprehensive, and current as possible.

Intended primarily for IHOs but ultimately for any interested individuals, the items are organized into various subject categories within two successive broad groups. Its purpose is to be a useful reference as a starting point for applicable authority, subject to the interpretation and extension of this authority by the IHO or other interested individual. For the specific overall organization, see the Table of Contents on the previous page, although presumably the “Find” feature will be the usual way of locating the applicable question and answer.

I. HEARING OFFICER ISSUES

A. IHO Qualifications

I-1. Does the IDEA provide any standards for IHO competence?

Yes, the 2004 amendments provided, for the first time, competence standards, which are broadly focused on knowing special education law, conducting hearings, and writing decisions.⁶ Specifically, the IDEA competency standards require IHOs to:

- (1) possess knowledge of, and the ability to understand, the provisions of [the IDEA], Federal and State regulations pertaining to [the IDEA], and legal interpretations of [the IDEA] by Federal and State courts;
- (2) possess the knowledge and ability to conduct hearings in accordance with appropriate, regulation rather than the “questionable” OSEP interpretation). The citations for policy letters herein include the parallel ed.gov URLs when available for improved accessibility to the reader.

⁵ For a systematic overview, see Perry A. Zirkel, State Laws for Due Process Hearings Under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, 38 J. NAT’L ASS’N ADMIN. L. JUDICIARY 3 (2018).

⁶ 20 U.S.C. § 1415(f)(3)(A).

standard legal practice; and (3) possess the knowledge and ability to render and write decisions in accordance with appropriate, standard legal practice.⁷

I-2. Similarly, does the IDEA provide specific training requirements for IHOs that are enforceable in individual cases?

No, training requirements are a matter of state law.⁸ Thus far, the courts have not interpreted these state law provisions as incorporated in the IDEA.⁹

I-3. What about the IDEA's impartiality requirements?

⁹ E.g., C.S. ex rel. Struble v. Cal. Dep't of Educ., 50 IDELR ¶ 63 (S.D. Cal. 2008); Adams v. Sch. Bd. of Anoka-Hennepin Indep. Sch. Dist. No. 11, 38 IDELR ¶ 6 (D. Minn. 2002); Carnwath v. Grasmick, 115 F. Supp. 2d at 583; Carnwath v. Bd. of Educ., 33 F. Supp. 2d 431, 434 (D. Md. 1998); cf. D.A. ex rel. Adams v. Fairfield-Suisun Unified Sch. Dist., 58 IDELR ¶ 105 (E.D. Cal. 2012) (SEA is not responsible in California for IHO training and competence); Canton Bd. of Educ. v. N.B., 343 F. Supp. 2d 123, 127 (D. Conn. 2004) (lack of systemic violation). But cf. C.E. v. Chappaqua Cent. Sch. Dist., 695 F. App'x 621, 624 (2d Cir. 2017) (applying "grandfathered" state law criteria in upholding competence of IHO).

In contrast to competence and training, IHO impartiality has been the subject of extensive litigation. Courts have been notably deferential, providing wide latitude to IHOs and generally not requiring the appearance of impropriety standard that applies to judges.¹⁰ The leading, but still not per se, exception for such deference, is for ex parte communications.¹¹ The overlapping issue of recusal is largely a matter of state law,¹² although an occasional court decision has identified applicable criteria or procedures for appellate review.¹³ Finally, the courts have rejected challenges of bias based on box scores of hearing or review officer decisions in favor of either party.¹⁴

I-4. Would a school district's notification to the IHO that final selection is contingent on the parent's approval violate the IDEA?

Not according to OSEP's interpretation, because the IDEA does not provide parents with a veto right in the appointment of IHOs.¹⁵ However, this interpretation does not seem to take into careful consideration that only a few state laws provide for party participation in the selection process.¹⁶

IHO Immunity

I-5. Do IHOs have the same sweeping, absolute immunity that judges have?

Yes, within the scope of their authority as IHOs.¹⁷

II. HEARING/DECISION ISSUES

A. Resolution Sessions

II-1. Does the resolution process (in 34 C.F.R. § 300.510) apply when a local education agency (LEA) files a due process complaint?

No, OSEP has explained that this process is not required in such cases.¹⁸ Rather, the forty-five-day period starts when the state education agency (SEA) and the parent receive the school district's complaint.¹⁹ According to OSEP, the parent's right to a sufficiency challenge and obligation to respond to the district's complaint are the same as for the district in the reverse situation.²⁰ For cases in which the parent raises a sufficiency challenge, OSEP added: "one way for an LEA to amend a due process complaint that is not sufficient is for the parent to agree in writing and be given an opportunity to resolve the LEA's due process complaint through a resolution meeting."²¹

II-2. Are the discussions in resolution sessions confidential?

According to OSEP's interpretation, the only confidentiality provisions that apply are the student records provisions in 34 C.F.R. § 300.610 and the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA).²² Absent a voluntary agreement between the parties for confidentiality, OSEP's position is that either party may introduce evidence of these discussions at the hearing.²³ Although the admissibility and the weight of such evidence remain within the IHO's discretion, the limited case law supports the OSEP conclusion.²⁴ Finally, although OSEP's opinion is that "[a] State could not . . .

require that the participants in a resolution meeting keep the discussions confidential,”²⁵ some states have adopted laws saying so.²⁶

II-3. After filing for the hearing, may the parent unilaterally waive the resolution session?

No. Like mediation, which must be voluntary for each party,²⁷ waiving the resolution session must be mutual (and in writing).²⁸ Moreover, the regulations require delay of the due process hearing if the parent fails to participate in the resolution session in the absence of such mutual agreement, and they also authorize the IHO to dismiss the case upon the district’s motion if the parent’s refusal to participate persists for the thirty-day period despite the district’s documented reasonable efforts to obtain parental participation.²⁹

II-4. Do difficulties communicating with the parents excuse a district’s delay in conducting the resolution session within the required fifteen-day period?³⁰

No, according to the federal district court in the District of Columbia, at least if the parent has legal representation.³¹

II-5. After convening the resolution session, may the district refuse to discuss the issues raised in a parent’s due process complaint, instead only offering to convene an IEP team meeting to address these issues?

No, according to OSEP, this position would violate the IDEA.³²

II-6. In a case where the parent filed for the hearing and either party refused to participate in the resolution session, must the other party seek the IHO's intervention?

Yes, according to OSEP.³³

II-7. Would a parent's refusal to participate in the resolution session in person justify an IHO's dismissal of her due process complaint?

No, according to OSEP, without considering whether the parent had valid reasons for refusing to physically attend the meeting.³⁴ Indeed, if the parent informs the district in advance of the meeting that circumstances prevent attendance in person, the district must offer the parent alternative means of participation, such as telephone or videoconferencing.³⁵

II-8. Would a state law that permits postponement of the resolution timeline when the SEA or LEA receives the parent's due process complaint shortly before or during an extended holiday break be consistent with the IDEA?

No, not according to OSEP.³⁶ The specified period is fifteen calendar days,³⁷ and the only exceptions are the alternate agreements between the parent and the LEA either to waive the resolution meeting or to utilize the mediation process.³⁸

II-9. May the parties mutually agree to extend the fifteen-day resolution period to resolve an expedited due process complaint?

No, according to OSEP. The agency based its conclusion that this deadline was absolute on the lack of any such waiver authority in 34 C.F.R. § 300.532(c) and the overriding purpose of promptness in the applicable disciplinary cases.³⁹

II-10. If fifteen days after the parent's filing for a due process hearing, the school district fails to convene or participate in the resolution session, what may the parents do to move the matter forward?

The parent may seek the IHO's intervention to start the timeline for the hearing.⁴⁰ Additionally, a federal district court ruled that this parental right is voluntary; thus, the parent's choice not to exercise it did not excuse the district's failure.⁴¹

II-11. If, after the parent files for a hearing, the parties neither waive nor hold the resolution session after thirty-one days, what happens on day thirty-one?

According to OSEP, the forty-five-day timeline for conducting the hearing and issuing a decision starts on day thirty-one.⁴²

II-12. Does insufficiency of the complaint postpone the timeline or negate the requirement for the resolution session?

Not according to OSEP. More specifically, the commentary accompanying the regulations declared: “We agree with S. Rpt. No. 108–185, p. 38 [i.e., the IDEA’s legislative history], which states that the resolution meeting should not be postponed when the LEA believes that a parent’s complaint is insufficient.”⁴³

II-13. Does a non-attorney parent advocate’s presence at the resolution session trigger the district’s qualified right to attend with its attorney?

Not according to OSEP, even if the advocate is entitled under state law to represent the parent/student at a due process hearing.⁴⁴

II-14. What is the legal result if a parent fails or refuses to participate in the resolution session upon the district’s timely attempt to schedule the session within fifteen days?

However, mitigating this eventuality, OSEP also stated that the SEA has the responsibility to enforce the LEA’s affirmative obligation to convene the resolution meeting within fifteen days of receiving the parent’s complaint. Id. Moreover, state regulations may contribute to the conclusion that the failure to waive or hold the resolution session precludes holding the impartial hearing. Colbert Cnty. Bd. of Educ. v. B.R.T. ex rel. Cagle, 51 IDELR ¶ 16 (N.D. Ala. 2008).

According to OSEP, the district’s obligation is to “continue to make diligent efforts throughout the remainder of the [thirty]-day resolution period to convince the parent to participate in a resolution meeting.” Examples of such efforts include “detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted and the results of those calls and copies of correspondence sent to the parents and any responses received.” Moreover, at the conclusion of this thirty-day period, the LEA “may request that a hearing officer dismiss the complaint when the LEA is unable to obtain the participation of a parent in a resolution meeting, despite making reasonable efforts to obtain the parent’s participation and documenting its efforts.”⁴⁵

II-15. For violations of the resolution-session requirements, must the other party seek the intervention of the IHO?

Yes, according to OSEP, “[t]he appropriate party must seek the hearing officer’s intervention to either dismiss the complaint or to initiate the hearing timeline, depending on the circumstances.”⁴⁶

II-16. Does a district’s delay in conducting the resolution session constitute a denial of the IDEA obligation to provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE)?

Not necessarily.⁴⁷

II-17. Must the district representative at the resolution session have final and absolute authority to resolve the complaint?

Not quite, according to an unpublished decision. In rejecting the superintendent and special education director in the circumstances of this case, the court concluded that said representative “satisfies the statutory requirement only if he or she, in fact, has the authority—by express delegation or otherwise—to make the decision about what the LEA will or will not do to resolve the issues presented in the IDEA complaint.”⁴⁸

II-18. Would the district’s violation of this requirement be the basis for an IHO order based on denial of FAPE?

No, according to the same decision, without an evidentiary basis that this procedural violation impeded the child’s substantive right to FAPE.⁴⁹

II-19. Does the IDEA permit the district to unilaterally amend the IEP during the resolution session to cure the basis for a tuition reimbursement claim?

No.⁵⁰

B. Sufficiency Process

II-20. Does the filing party’s failure to provide a proposed resolution to the problem automatically render the complaint insufficient?

No, because this specification for the complaint only applies to the extent known and available to the party at the time of filing.⁵¹ Moreover, based on the determination of insufficiency being a matter of the IHO’s discretion,⁵² OSEP has concluded, “the inclusion or omission of a proposed resolution should not be read to create a conflict with, or limitation upon, an impartial hearing officer’s authority and ability to formulate an appropriate equitable remedy.”⁵³

II-21. Does the IDEA require the noncomplaining party to specify the basis for its insufficiency motion?

No.⁵⁴

II-22. What steps are available to the complaining party if an IHO rules that the due process complaint is insufficient?

Citing the pertinent IDEA regulations and the comments accompanying them, OSEP answered that 1) the IHO must identify the specific insufficiencies in the notice; 2) the filing party may amend its complaint if the other party provides written consent and has an opportunity for mediation or a resolution session; 3) the IHO may, if the filing party does not exercise this amendment option, dismiss the insufficient complaint; and 4) the party may re-file if within the two-year limitations period.⁵⁵

II-23. If the filing party, with written consent from the other party, amends its complaint, do the fifteen-day timeline for the resolution meeting, the thirty-day resolution period and the party participation requirement re-commence?

Yes, according to OSEP.⁵⁶

II-24. Have courts been supportive of strict IHO interpretations of the IDEA's sufficiency requirements?

The limited case law to date leaves the answer to this question unsettled. The Third Circuit upheld an IHO's dismissal of a case where the parent unsuccessfully argued that the Supreme Court's characterization in *Schaffer v. Weast*⁵⁷ of the IDEA's pleading requirements as "minimal" allowed less than strict compliance with all of the required elements of the complaint.⁵⁸ Yet, in another unpublished decision, the federal district court in New Hampshire reversed an IHO's dismissal for insufficiency, alternatively citing with approval this dictum in Schaffer and the school district's failure to contest the matter within the prescribed fifteen-day window.⁵⁹ Providing a third approach, the Eighth Circuit held, in an unpublished decision, that the IDEA does not provide for judicial review of IHO sufficiency decisions.⁶⁰

II-25. Conversely, do courts favor a strict interpretation of the IDEA's requirements for the defendant's response to the complaint?

No, to the extent that the federal district court in the District of Columbia has ruled that a default judgment, i.e., dismissal with prejudice, would generally not be—without affecting the student's substantive rights—an appropriate sanction for failure to adhere to requirement.⁶¹

C. Jurisdiction

II-26. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for violations of the prehearing, including sufficiency, process?

Yes, at least for a district's failure to send a prior written notice to the parent regarding the subject matter of the parent's due process complaint and the failure to provide a response to the complaint within the resulting required ten days.⁶²

II-27. Other than unilateral placement (i.e., tuition reimbursement) cases, do IHOs have jurisdiction for the IDEA claims of a child who resides in, but is not enrolled, in the school district?

The issue is not clearly settled. According to a federal district court decision in the District of Columbia, the answer is yes.⁶³ The court based its conclusion on the language of the IDEA that triggers a school district's obligations, including Child Find, on residency, not enrollment.⁶⁴ Other courts have extended this answer even if the child's residency changes.⁶⁵ OSEP agrees with this answer.⁶⁶ However, the Eighth Circuit answered the question no at least under a Minnesota law that requires the impartial hearing to be "conducted by and in the school district responsible for assuring that an appropriate program is provided."⁶⁷ The court reasoned that such challenges were moot because the new school district is responsible for providing the hearing.⁶⁸ The federal administrative agency subsequently explained that, “absent additional legal authority,” it could not take action contrary to change this jurisdictional difference.⁶⁹

Conversely, a decision within the Eighth Circuit addressed the issue of whether the IHO has jurisdiction for the case when the parents moved their residence to outside the district and did not file for the hearing until after moving.⁷⁰

II-28. Who has the authority to determine whether a parent’s hearing request constitutes a new issue compared to the parent’s previous adjudicated request?

According to OSEP commentary accompanying the 1999 IDEA regulations, this jurisdictional issue is for the IHO—not the school district (or the SEA)—to decide.⁷¹

II-29. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for issues raised by the non-complaining party during the pre-hearing or hearing process?

Similarly, according to the OSEP commentary accompanying the 2006 IDEA regulations, “such matters should be left to the discretion of [IHOs] in light of the particular facts and circumstances of a case.”⁷²

II-30. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for cases that the parent has previously subjected to CRP?

Yes, and they are not bound by the CRP rulings.⁷³ However, whether

II-31. Do IHOs have jurisdiction over FAPE issues for students whom parents have voluntarily placed in private, including parochial, schools (in contrast with those unilaterally placed for tuition reimbursement)?

No, except for the Child Find obligation of the school district where the private school is located.⁷⁷ Arguably, an additional exception is the extent that a few courts have interpreted state laws, such as those providing for dual enrollment, as extending LEA obligations for special education and related services to parentally-placed children in private schools.⁷⁸

II-32. Do IHOs have jurisdiction to decide the child’s residency as a threshold issue antecedent to the IDEA merits of the case?

Yes, according to limited authority to date.⁷⁹

II-33. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for Child Find claims, although the IDEA is ambiguous or silent about this issue?

Yes, according to a Ninth Circuit decision.⁸⁰

II-34. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for safety concerns with the child’s IEP?

Yes.⁸¹

II-35. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for (a) district’s promotion and retention decisions, or (b) disputes about the student’s grades?

(a) No, according to OSEP, unless related to FAPE or placement, such as where “a student does not receive the services that are specified on his or her IEP that were designed to assist the student in meeting the promotion standards.”⁸² Moreover, such matters may be regarded as within the school district’s exclusive authority.⁸³

Although there may be exceptions where the issue is relatively limited, and a single plaintiff is bringing the claim, the IHO generally does not have jurisdiction for class-action type claims.⁸⁵

II-37. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for SEAs as defendants?

No, except for cases in which the SEA is providing direct services to the child.⁸⁶

II-38. Do IHOs have jurisdiction to determine and order the stay-put for a child with disabilities?

Yes.⁸⁷

II-39. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for parental challenges to an IEP that the parent agreed to or an IEP that is not the most recent one?

Yes, according to OSEP, provided that the filing is within the prescribed statute of limitations.⁸⁸

II-40. Do IHOs have jurisdiction to override a parent's refusal to provide consent for initial services or for a parent's subsequent revocation of consent for continued services?

No, the regulations are rather clear that these matters are no longer within the IHO's jurisdiction.⁸⁹ However, on the opposite side, the commentary to the amended IDEA regulations add this clarification for selective refusals:

If, however, the parent and the [district] disagree about whether the child would be provided with FAPE if the child did not receive a particular special education or related service, the parent may use the due process procedures in subpart E of these regulations to obtain a ruling that the service with which the parent disagrees is not appropriate for their child.⁹⁰

In contrast, other changes in placement (i.e., after initial services but not revocation) that require consent under state law are within the IHO's jurisdiction.⁹¹

II-41. What if the parent's refusal is for consent for an initial evaluation and the child is either parentally placed in a private school or is home-schooled?

Similarly, the IHO does not have jurisdiction to override the parent's refusal.⁹²

No, according to OSEP's interpretation. IHOs do not have jurisdiction for any disputes between parents as compared to disputes between parents and "public agencies."⁹³ In such cases, the IDEA allows either parent to provide or revoke consent, with their disagreements being subject exclusively (i.e., not under the IDEA) to the resolution mechanisms available "based on State or local law."⁹⁴ Such consent disputes when concerned with evaluation, rather than services, may be another matter.⁹⁵

II-42. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for issues arising concerning the education records of the child?

Although various hearing and review officers have broadly answered this question with a "no," often based on the coverage of FERPA,⁹⁶ the more defensible answer would appear to be "it depends" in light of the overlapping coverage of the IDEA. More specifically, if the student records issue concerns the identification, evaluation, FAPE, or placement of the child, it would appear to be within the concurrent jurisdiction of the IHO,⁹⁷ with one possible exception—if the issue concerns amending the child's records (based, for example, on inaccurate or misleading information), the IDEA regulations may be interpreted as reserving the matter exclusively for the FERPA hearing procedure.⁹⁸ Conversely, a “stand-alone” student records claim for an IDEA-eligible child would fail if it had no direct connection to the specified subject matter jurisdiction of IHOs.⁹⁹

II-44. Do IHOs have jurisdiction where the district offered, and the parent refused, a settlement prior to the hearing that offered all the relief that the parents sought?

Yes, according to an unpublished Fifth Circuit decision that reasoned, apparently properly, that the effect under the IDEA may be to preclude attorneys’ fees recovery but not subject matter jurisdiction.¹⁰⁰

II-45. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for enforcement of private settlement agreements?

The limited case law is unsettled on this question. Some jurisdictions support an affirmative answer,¹⁰¹ but other courts say no.¹⁰² OSEP

II-46. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for homeschooled students under the IDEA?

Generally not, because although not directly on point the limited OSEP and the court interpretations appear to consider homeschooled students as beyond the IDEA entitlement with a limited exception.¹⁰⁵ The exception, which is for state laws that treat home schools as II-47. Do IHOs have jurisdiction to enforce a previous IHO decision, an issue typically arising when the parent claims that the school district failed to implement the order(s) of the previous decision?

No. The prevailing view is that the two appropriate forums are the state CRP under the IDEA¹⁰⁸ and, alternatively via various legal bases, the courts,¹⁰⁹ rather than the IHO process.¹¹⁰

¹⁰⁹ The usual procedure is a § 1983 action. E.g., Jeremy H. v. Mount Lebanon Sch. Dist., 95 F.3d 272, 279 (3d Cir. 1996); *Robinson v. Where the district belatedly implemented the IHOs

II-48. Do IHOs have the authority—whether viewed as a matter of jurisdiction or remedies—to raise and resolve an issue sua sponte, i.e., on their own without either party raising it?

This issue is unsettled. An OSEP policy interpretation seems to suggest a “yes” answer for the particular issue of the child’s “stay-put.”¹¹¹ On the other hand, the limited case law arguably answers “no” to this question more generally whether viewed as a matter of the underlying issue or the predicate remedy, whether for declaratory¹¹² or orders, a federal court ruled that the parents lacked standing for such an enforcement action. A.S. v. Harrison Twp. Bd. of Educ., 66 F. Supp. 3d 539, 550 (D.N.J. 2014). Finally, the courts are split as to whether the IDEA is a viable avenue for judicial enforcement. E.g., B.D. v. District of Columbia, 817 F.3d 792 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (discussing the case law to date and rejecting the view that a particular provision of the IDEA provides such a cause of action).

¹¹⁰ However, the concurring judge in a recent federal appeals court decision pointed to the U.S. Department of Education’s brief in a previous case to conclude that the IHO route “might” be viable. B.D. v. District of Columbia, 817 F.3d 792, 803–04 (D.C. Cir. 2016). Moreover, where the district is the initiating party, the answer may vary. Compare Fresno Unified Sch. Dist. v. K.U., 63 IDELR ¶ 250 (E.D. Cal. 2014), with Bd. of Educ. v. Ill. State Bd. of Educ., 741 F. Supp. 2d 920 (N.D. Ill. 2010). For the related issue of whether the IHO has the jurisdiction to reopen the case upon the request of either party for enforcement purposes, see Bd. of Educ. of Ellenville Cent. Sch. Dist., 28 IDELR 337 (N.Y. SEA 1998). For the applicable time period for implementation, see Letter to Voigt, 64 IDELR ¶ 220 (OSEP 2014), <https://www2.ed.gov/policy/speced/guid/idea/memosdcltrs/acc-11-020700r-pa-voigt-dueprocesshearingdecisions.pdf>.

¹¹¹ Letter to Armstrong, 28 IDELR 303 (OSEP 1997). The question to OSEP contained the at least partial sua sponte condition that “stay put is not raised as an issue during the pre-hearing stages,” but the answer did not specifically differentiate this contingency.

¹¹² E.g., C.W.L. v. Pelham Union Free Sch. Dist., 149 F. Supp. 3d 451 (S.D.N.Y. 2015); Saki ex rel. Saki v. Haw. Dep’t of Educ., 50 IDELR ¶ 103 (D. Haw. 2008); *Mifflin Cnty. Sch. Dist. v. The third case provides only limited authority, because the court was addressing the authority of the second-tier review panel, not the IHO, and its rationale included that doing so “without the benefit of a full factual record and adjudication on the issue [would result in] in a premature interruption of the administrative process.” Mifflin Cnty. Sch. Dist. v. Special Educ. Due Process Appeals Bd., 800 A.2d at 1014.

injunctive¹¹³ relief. Moreover, whether the complaint sufficiently raised the issue depends on various factors, at least in the Second Circuit.¹¹⁴

II-49. Does expiration of the forty-five-day period prior to the start of the hearing, including any extensions, deprive the IHO of jurisdiction for the case?

No, according to a federal district court decision in Hawaii. Contrary to the IHO's interpretation, the court concluded that this automatic divestiture of jurisdiction would "fl[y] in the face of the very spirit of the IDEA" and could result in a "serious injustice" to the rights of the parent and child with a disability.¹¹⁵

II-50. In a disciplinary hearing, where manifestation determination is at issue, does the IHO have jurisdiction to determine whether the student violated the school's code of conduct?

Yes. More specifically, according to OSEP, "there may be instances where a hearing officer, in his discretion, would address whether such a violation has occurred."¹¹⁶

¹¹³ E.g., Dep't of Educ., Haw. v. Leo W., 226 F. Supp. 3d 1081 (D. Haw. 2015); District of Columbia v. Walker, 109 F. Supp. 3d 58 (D.D.C. 2015); Lofisa S. ex rel. S.S. v. Haw. II-51. Do IHOs have the authority to dispose of a case on the grounds of mootness?

Yes, but they should make sure that the case meets the applicable relatively narrow standard for mootness.¹¹⁷

II-52. Do IHOs have jurisdiction when the parent names a SEA as a defendant?

According to OSEP, this issue is within the IHO's discretionary authority. More specifically, the IHO "has the authority to determine, based on the individual facts and circumstances in the case, whether the SEA is a proper party to the due process hearing."¹¹⁸ The limited case law establishes at least that SEAs are not necessary parties at due process hearings.¹¹⁹

II-53. May a state, through its procedures, or the IHO limit the issues to those previously raised at the IEP team level?

Not according to OSEP, because such limits "would impose additional procedural hurdles on the right to a due process hearing that are not contemplated by the IDEA."¹²⁰

II-54. Do IHOs have remedial authority for the extent of related services determined by another agency via an interagency agreement under state law?

Yes, according to a Ninth Circuit decision. However, the answer ultimately depends not only on the IDEA but also the state (which, in this case, was California) law.¹²¹

II-55. Do IHOs have jurisdiction for claims under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act (§ 504) or the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)?

In most states, the IHO, if within the system under the IDEA, does not have jurisdiction for § 504/ADA claims regardless of whether they are on behalf of a child with an IEP or a child who is only covered by § 504/ADA; however, a few states (e.g., Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania) are full exceptions, and others provide for jurisdiction in certain specialized situations (e.g., if the § 504 or ADA issue is intertwined with the IDEA issue(s) or if the school district makes special contractual arrangements with the state IDEA IHO system).¹²²

D. Timelines in General

II-56. Does the total time limit amount to 75 days?

Not necessarily, due to variance in the regulatory provisions for the resolution period, which could cause it to be less or more than 30 days, and in the applications of the excusal provision extending beyond the 45-day limit for the post-resolution period.¹²³

II-57. If the district allegedly failed to respond to the parents' due process complaint within the required ten-day period, what is the appropriate avenue of relief?

According to OSEP, the appropriate recourse is for the parents to proceed with the hearing, with the IHO having the discretion to identify and resolve this issue.¹²⁴

II-58. What is the statute of limitations for filing for a due process hearing under the IDEA?

In short, two years unless state law prescribes a different period.¹²⁵ However, the interpretation and application of the statutory language, which the regulations repeat without elaboration, are complicated. The complications include (1) determination of the triggering point of when the parent or district had actual or constructive notice of the alleged action; (2) the scope of the two specified exceptions; and (3) the potentially broadening effect of the alleged action and its redressability.¹²⁶

II-59. Does the IDEA's statute of limitations for an impartial hearing call for a "look back" approach from the filing date?

No, the starting point is the date that the filing party "knew of should have known" (KOSHK) of the alleged violation.¹²⁷

II-60. Have courts generally interpreted the exceptions for the limitations period broadly or narrowly?

Although the case law is limited and not uniform, the majority of courts have taken a rather narrow view.¹²⁸

II-61. If the IHO exceeds the forty-five-day regulatory deadline, is a reviewing court likely to provide the challenging party with remedial relief?

Not in the majority of the cases, because the courts treat it as a procedural violation, which often does not result in harm to the student. For example, in a Seventh Circuit case where the court upheld the IHO's decision that the district had provided an appropriate program for the child, the parent's claim was to no avail.¹²⁹ Conversely, in the minority of cases where the court either uses a per se approach or the court concludes that this procedural violation is prejudicial, the result may be tuition reimbursement or compensatory education.¹³⁰ Other consequences to the defendant may be attorneys' fees,¹³¹ an exception to the exhaustion doctrine,¹³² or possibly compensatory damages under § 504.¹³³ Regardless of the judicial consequences, OSEP continues to emphasize the SEA's responsibility to monitor compliance with this timeline, with the limited exception being for allowable extensions.¹³⁴

II-62. Do the IDEA regulations' allowance for extensions excuse any such alleged delay?

Yes, but 1) the extensions must be requested by a party (not unilaterally by the IHO) and for specific periods of time;¹³⁵ and 2) the defendant agency—whether the LEA or the SEA—ultimately must show the documentation and justification for the extensions.¹³⁶

II-63. Does the IHO have discretion to deny such requests?

Not, under the preemption doctrine,¹³⁹ if they provide less protection to the child, unless the IDEA expressly provides for state variation, as it does for the limitations periods¹⁴⁰ or for evaluation.¹⁴¹

II-65. Does the SEA's monitoring responsibility to assure correction of noncompliance within one year limit the IHO's remedial order for compensatory education to one year?

No, not in light of the statute of limitations and broad IHO remedial authority under the IDEA. OSEP recently appeared to agree with the inapplicability or at least relaxed applicability of the regulation requiring the state to correct noncompliance “as soon as possible, and in no case later than one year”¹⁴² by opining that “hearing decisions must be implemented within the timeframe prescribed by the [IHO] or, if there is no timeframe prescribed by the [IHO], within a

E. Expedited Hearings

II-66. Under what circumstances is the parent entitled to an expedited hearing?

The IDEA regulations require the opportunity for an expedited hearing when the parent challenges a manifestation determination or any other aspect of a district-imposed disciplinary change in placement or interim alternate educational setting.¹⁴⁴

II-67. Under what circumstances are school districts entitled to an expedited hearing?

The school district must have the opportunity for such a hearing upon requesting an interim alternate educational setting based on substantial likelihood of the current placement resulting in injury to the child or others.¹⁴⁵

II-68. What is the timeline for an expedited hearing?

Unless the state has adopted different procedural rules, the deadlines are as follows, starting with the receipt of the complaint: resolution session – within seven days; hearing – within twenty school days; decision – within ten school days of the hearing.¹⁴⁶ The actual total length varies due to the wide variance in district calendars as it applies to the meaning of “school days.”¹⁴⁷ Moreover, according to OSEP, the reference to “school days” for the second and third parts of this specified schedule includes days during the summer period for school districts that “operate summer school programs for both students with, and students without, disabilities,” but not when the summer programming is only ESY.¹⁴⁸ Moreover, OSEP clarified that the overall forty-five-day deadline, upon completion of the resolution period, applies regardless of whether the summer days count for these two steps.¹⁴⁹

II-69. Do the IDEA provisions for specific IHO extensions apply, whether directly upon the request of one or both parties or via state law, to expedited hearings?

Apparently not, because—as summarized in the previous item—the IDEA regulation for expedited hearings provides its own timeline and the express allowance for state law variations preserves these deadlines.¹⁵⁰ OSEP recently reached this conclusion, reasoning that “[t]here is no provision in the Part B regulations that would give a hearing officer conducting an expedited due process hearing the authority to extend the timeline for issuing this determination at the request of a party to the expedited due process hearing.”¹⁵¹ More recently, OSEP reaffirmed this conclusion, emphasizing that waiver of the IDEA timeline for expedited hearings is not permissible.¹⁵²

II-70. In expedited hearings, does the usual five-day disclosure rule apply or does a special two-day rule replace it?

Although the proposed IDEA regulations contained a two-day exception for expedited hearings, the final version retained the five-day rule without exception.¹⁵³ The Agency's stated reasoning was that "limiting the disclosure time to two days would significantly impair the ability of the parties to prepare for the hearing, since one purpose of the expedited hearing is to provide protection to the child."¹⁵⁴ In an analogous case under state law, a federal court in New Jersey remanded the case back to the IHO for a new hearing based on the prejudicial effect of not providing the requisite five-day notice.¹⁵⁵

II-71. For expedited hearings, may a party challenge the sufficiency of the complaint or may an IHO otherwise extend the timeline for completion?

No, according to OSEP.¹⁵⁶

II-72. Do the requirements for expedited hearings apply if the hearing request encompasses both the requisite disciplinary circumstances and one or more other issues?

In light of the qualified discretion accorded to IHOs, OSEP opines that in such cases "a hearing officer could decide that it is prudent to bifurcate the hearing, thus allowing for an expedited hearing on the discipline and removal issues, and a separate hearing on any other issues.”¹⁵⁷

II-73. Do the two remedies that the IDEA regulations specify for expedited hearings limit the IHO from other relief?

No, not according to OSEP. The regulations authorize the IHO to restore the student’s placement or order a 45-day interim alternate educational setting agency.¹⁵⁸ The agency issued guidance concluding that these two remedies do not preclude an IHO from “ordering relief that is appropriate to remedy the alleged violations based on the facts and circumstances of each individual complaint.”¹⁵⁹

F. Prehearing and Hearing Procedures, Including Evidentiary Matters

II-74. Does a school district practice of providing the IHO with a copy of the student’s records immediately upon receiving notice of the IHO’s appointment violate the IDEA, including its incorporated FERPA requirements?

Not according to OSEP, regardless of whether the parent or the district was the filing party.¹⁶⁰

II-75. Are discovery procedures available in IDEA due process hearings?

The IDEA does not provide for discovery (beyond the five-day rule),¹⁶¹ and only a minority of state laws provide for it in IDEA hearings.¹⁶² If state law is silent in this matter, OSEP has stated that whether discovery procedures are available and, if so, their nature and extent are within the discretion of the IHO.¹⁶³ In a Florida case, the appellate court held that in the absence of state law the IHO lacked authority to order discovery.¹⁶⁴ However, a year later the Florida's legislature repealed the exemption of IDEA hearings from the statute providing such authority.¹⁶⁵ In the minority of jurisdictions that allow for discovery in IDEA cases, such as Florida and Massachusetts, related legal issues come to the fore.¹⁶⁶

II-76. Does the IDEA require a prehearing conference?

No, although it is generally regarded as best practice for IHOs, and some state laws require it.¹⁶⁷

II-77. Does the IDEA specify the time or place for the hearing?

No, except that the time and place be reasonably convenient to the parents and the child.¹⁶⁸

¹⁶⁸ OSERS Assistance to States for the Education of Children with Disabilities, 34 C.F.R. § 300.515(d) (2019).

No, as the Ninth Circuit explained, the IDEA only requires the district to “send to the parent a response” to the complaint and, thus, “[a] due process hearing is the redress for an unsatisfactory response.”¹⁶⁹

II-79. What is the proper procedure if the district fails to file any response at all to the complaint?

According to the Ninth Circuit, rather than go forward with the hearing, the IHO “must order a response and shift the cost of the delay to the school district, regardless of who is ultimately the prevailing party.”¹⁷⁰ Moreover, the Ninth Circuit advised that the IHO should raise the issue sua sponte even if the parent does not make a motion on this matter.¹⁷¹

II-80. Does the IDEA allow the filing party to amend the complaint?

Yes, but only if (a) the other party consents in writing to the amendment and has the opportunity to resolve the due process complaint through the resolution meeting; or (b) the IHO grants permission no later than five calendar days before the first hearing session.¹⁷²

II-81. Do IHOs have authority to dismiss a case and, if so, with prejudice?

IHOs certainly have the authority for dismissal in certain circumstances.¹⁷³ First, the IDEA regulations supply some of these circumstances, such as explicitly authorizing dismissals with regard to parents' failure to participate in resolution sessions¹⁷⁴ and implicitly authorizing dismissals with regard to complaints that the hearing officer deems to be insufficient.¹⁷⁵

Second, some state laws provide IHOs with authority for dismissals with or without prejudice.¹⁷⁶ For example, Georgia authorizes the IHO to write a decision for dismissal with prejudice when the party with the burden of production does not meet its burden of persuasion¹⁷⁷ and to issue a dismissal without prejudice upon a party's motion for voluntary dismissal for cause.¹⁷⁸

Third, courts have delineated other circumstances, such as a federal court decision upholding dismissal with prejudice where the parents repeatedly violated the IHO's hearing orders¹⁷⁹ and another federal court decision ruling that dismissal with prejudice should be reserved for extreme cases, with close calls—especially for pro se parents—being against this sanction.¹⁸⁰ An occasional court decision has relied on state law provisions, such as the incorporation of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure,¹⁸¹ but without a careful analysis of the possibly preempting IDEA language.

Finally, however, indirectly raising preemption questions for contrary state laws, OSEP recently issued the following interpretation:

To the extent any summary proceedings in a hearing on a due process complaint—other than a sufficiency determination—limit, or conflict with, either party’s rights, including the right to present evidence and confront, cross-examine, and compel the attendance of witnesses, we believe such proceedings can be used only when both parties consent to use the summary process (e.g., cross-motions for summary judgment).¹⁸²

In general, as a matter of best practice, it would appear to be advisable to limit such summary decisions to exceptional circumstances and, in such cases, to 1) hold a hearing where the basis is a factual matter of material dispute;¹⁸³ 2) limit dismissals with prejudice to cases of rather egregious conduct by the filing party, whether separately sanctionable or not;¹⁸⁴ and 3) issue a written opinion with factual findings and legal conclusions sufficient to withstand judicial review.¹⁸⁵ Finally, for the variation of a contingent order of dismissal with prejudice, a federal district court upheld the authority under an IHO's equitable powers when state law does not expressly prohibit such an order, with the possible abuse of discretion based on the circumstances.¹⁸⁶

II-82. Does the same answer apply to motions for summary judgment?

Basically yes. First, the use of these terms in the context of IDEA hearings is often without the same relatively clear distinction that applies in the judicial context, especially because discovery often does not apply in the same full sense.¹⁸⁷ Second, several state laws, especially those where IHOs are central panel ALJs, expressly provide for summary judgments as part of their standard civil procedure practice.¹⁸⁸ A recent federal court decision upheld IHO use of summary judgment dispositions in such states as not violating the parent's rights under the IDEA for confrontation and cross examination.¹⁸⁹

II-83. Do IHOs have wide discretion with regard in conducting the hearing, including determining the scope of evidence?

Yes.¹⁹⁰ For example, the weighing of testimony, even in the absence

Reg. 46,540, 46,691 (Aug. 14, 2006) (to be codified at 34 C.F.R. pt. 300)); 2) ruling upon compliance with timelines and the statute of limitations (id. at 46,705-46,706); 3)

of rebuttal or objection, is within the IHO's authority.¹⁹¹ The generally applicable judicial standard of review is abuse of discretion, which usually favors the IHO.¹⁹² However, the federal district court for the District of Columbia has required IHOs to provide parents with a flexible opportunity for providing evidence to support the remedies of tuition reimbursement and compensatory education where the parents prove the requisite entitlement for such relief.¹⁹³ Similarly, courts have provided ample latitude to IHOs in maintaining an efficient completion of the case, keeping the parties focused on the issues.¹⁹⁴

II-84. Do IHOs have the authority to determine procedural issues that the IDEA does not address?

Yes, according to OSEP, just as long as “such determinations are determining whether the non-complaining party may raise other issues at the hearing not specified in the complaint (id. at 46706); and 4) providing proper latitude for pro se parties (id. at 46,699).

II-85. What are the key factors that IHOs should carefully consider and reasonably explain in their credibility determinations?

Although various factors may apply depending on the circumstances, they include the extent of the witness's pertinent experience with the child¹⁹⁶ and the witness's relevant expertise.¹⁹⁷

II-86. Do the Federal Rules of Evidence, such as Rule 702 concerning the standard for expert witnesses, apply to IDEA impartial hearings?

Not directly, because they apply to federal courts; state courts may follow a different standard.¹⁹⁸ If state law does not specify the applicable procedural rules for IHOs, the Federal Rules would appear to provide guidance by analogy within the broad discretion of IHOs.¹⁹⁹ In general, the IDEA does not require detailed procedures and formal rules of evidence.²⁰⁰

II-87. May an IHO limit the number of days for the hearing?

Yes, according to OSEP, just as long as the IHO provides the parties with the hearing rights that the regulations prescribe.²⁰¹ Although OSEP has referred to the IHO's responsibility "to accord each party a meaningful opportunity to exercise these rights during the course of the hearing,"²⁰² the courts' aforementioned abuse of discretion standard provides ample latitude to the IHO to rule in favor of efficiency, particularly in light of the forty-five day regulatory deadline.²⁰³ More recently, OSEP has opined that a state best-practice

Due process does not require formal rules of evidence and procedure. Detailed rules of procedure are no panacea against lengthy, contentious, wasteful, divisive, or delay-causing arguments. Indeed, highly formalized systems of legal procedure can be fodder for delay. Due process is not always served by bringing every dispute into a mini-courtroom where only lawyers can navigate the myriad rules. A formalized system could serve to disenfranchise and exclude the very people meant to be served, namely the parents and the educators.

guideline limiting a hearing to three sessions of six hours per session does not violate the IDEA just as long as it allows the IHO to make an exception.²⁰⁴

II-88. In a case that has more than one hearing session, does the five-day disclosure rule apply as of the first session or may the IHO extend it to a subsequent session in which the evidence may be proffered?

Although the case law is slim, the more flexible interpretation would appear to be within the IHO's discretion.²⁰⁵

II-89. Do IHOs have the discretion to determine the consequences of not meeting the five-day disclosure deadline?

A literal reading of the regulation would suggest an answer of No.²⁰⁶ However, the authority to date supports an answer of Yes, including, but not limited, to prohibiting the introduction of the evidence or allowing the rescheduling of the hearing.²⁰⁷

II-90. Do state rules that provide specific procedures (e.g., numbered and redacted exhibits) or consequences (e.g., dismissal upon re-filing after fatally failing to meet the deadline in the first hearing) in relation to the IDEA disclosure requirement permissible?

Yes, according to OSEP, just as long as they fit within the considerable latitude of states for such rules and the broad discretion of IHOs for their application.²⁰⁸

II-91. Does the IHO have the authority to allow testimony by telephone or television?

According to OSEP, this matter is within the IHO's discretion, subject to judicial review in terms of whether the parties had meaningful opportunity to exercise the rights specified in the IDEA regulations, including the right to "present evidence and confront, cross-examine

There are no "tests" for the IHO to follow in making such determinations, but the purpose of the rule is, in OSEP's view, "to allow all parties the opportunity to adequately respond to the impact of the evidence presented, and to eliminate the element of surprise as a strategy a party may employ to influence the outcome of the hearing decision." II-92. Do IHOs have the authority to compel the appearance of witness, including those who are not district employees?

According to OSEP, yes.²¹²

II-93. May an IHO order the LEA to provide the parent with e-mails from or to school district personnel?

II-94. Do IHOs have authority to order the district to provide the parent with access to the records of one or more other students as part of an impartial hearing?

Not without the consent of the parents of the other students, according to the Family Policy Compliance Office (FPCO), which is responsible for administering FERPA. For the hearing in question, which concerned a disciplinary record that included identifiable information about not only the student with disabilities whose parent initiated the hearing but also other students, FPCO provided this guidance:

[A] school district should redact the names of, or information which would be directly related to, any other students mentioned in another student's education records before providing a parent access to the student's education records. In instances where joint records cannot be easily redacted or the information segregated out, the school district may satisfy a request for access by informing the parent about the contents of the record which relate to his or her child.²¹⁵

Adding support for this answer, a federal district court recently upheld an IHO's refusal to allow the parents, via their expert, to access the records of other students. The court reasoned that even if the parents had obtained a court order to compel the district to produce redacted copies, the IHO would not have erred in denying their request in light of the overriding individualized nature of FAPE.²¹⁶

II-95. Do IHOs have contempt powers?

No, unless state law provides such authority.²¹⁷

II-96. Do IHOs have the authority to issue disciplinary sanctions against a party or the party's attorney for what the IHO regards as hearing misconduct?

Again, the answer is a matter of state law, according to OSEP.²¹⁸ The published case law is limited and largely supportive.²¹⁹

II-97. May an IHO dismiss a hearing after multiple postponements?

It depends on state law. In a Massachusetts case, the court reversed such a dismissal where the hearing officer did so after granting the latest postponement request, but state law required the hearing officer to either 1) deny the motion for postponement or 2) grant it and set a new hearing date.²²⁰ student's education records without prior consent of the parent?

Yes, according to OSEP, if the parent filed for the hearing. Conversely, according to OSEP, if the district filed for a hearing, the school district may do so but only after providing due disclosure to the parent and via witnesses, not on an ex parte basis.²²¹

II-99. Does the IDEA entitle the parent to a choice between a written or electronic record of the hearing?

Yes. Although the IDEA previously did not offer the parent a choice,²²² the 1997 amendments revised the language to provide parents with “the right to a written, or, at the option of the parents, electronic verbatim record of such hearing.”²²³ The 2004 amendments have retained this choice-providing language. However, the choice is for one or the other, not both.²²⁴

II-100. Does an audio-tape qualify as an “electronic verbatim record of the hearing”?

Probably yes.²²⁵

II-101. Does this right to a transcript or other verbatim record extend to prehearing sessions?

²²² E.g., Edward B. v. Paul, 814 F.2d 52, 54 (1st Cir. 1987).

²²³ Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, 20 U.S.C. § 1415(h)(3) (2018). Thus, the First Circuit's aforementioned (supra note 221) Edward B. decision is no longer good law. E.g., Stringer v. St. James Sch. Dist., 446 F.3d 799 (8th Cir. 2006).

²²⁵ One reason is that at the time of the 1997 Amendments to the IDEA, the availability of digital records was much more limited than now, thus affecting the determination of Congressional intent. Second, the Eighth Circuit reasoned that in reenacting the phrase Congress is presumed to have been aware of the previous judicial interpretation that “an audio recording is included as an electronic verbatim record under the IDEA.” Stringer v. St. James Sch. Dist., 446 F.3d at 804–05.

No, according to an unpublished Eleventh Circuit decision, unless state law expressly provides otherwise.²²⁶

II-102. Do the parties have a right to a transcript or other verbatim record before their closing oral arguments or written briefs?

Probably not under the IDEA, unless state law provides otherwise. The reason is that OSEP has interpreted the timing of the availability of the oral or written verbatim record as relatively open-ended, extending even after the expiration of the period to appeal the IHO's decision.²²⁷

II-103. Is the parent entitled to a translation of the hearing transcript into his or her native language?

Not in the absence of a state law according to a Pennsylvania appellate court in a gifted education case.²²⁸

II-104. Does the failure to provide the parent with the complete transcript or recording amount to a denial of FAPE?

It depends on whether the missing testimony is significant in terms of affecting the child's substantive right to FAPE.²²⁹

II-105. May IHOs take official notice of a fact or standard akin to a court's power of judicial notice?

The pertinent case law is insufficient to provide a clear answer where state law does not expressly provide this power.²³⁰

II-106. May an IHO admit hearsay evidence?

Generally, yes unless state law dictates otherwise,²³¹ but relying on it in the IHO's decision without corroborative proof may be problematic.²³²

II-107. May an IHO admit evidence from the period prior to the applicable statute of limitations?

Yes. This determination is within the IHO's broad discretion,²³³ which allows for three overlapping bases. First, the calculation of this period provides latitude between the triggering KOSHK date and "the alleged action that forms the basis of the due process complaint."²³⁴ Second, courts have distinguished the relevant claims period from the relevant evidentiary period.²³⁵ Finally, the IHO's discretion extends to limited evidence for contextual purposes.²³⁶

II-108. Does the “snapshot” rule, or evidentiary standard, apply for IHO’s assessment of the appropriateness of IEPs?

It depends on the jurisdiction. For example, the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Ninth, and D.C. Circuits have adopted this standard,²³⁷ whereas the Tenth Circuit partially disagreed²³⁸ previous to the seeming endorsement of the snapshot approach in *Andrew F.*²³⁹ This approach considers the time of the educational decision, not the adjudicator’s deliberations, as controlling to determine appropriateness.

II-109. On the other hand, what is the “four corners” evidentiary rule in relation to FAPE determinations?

This standard, which originates in contract law, exclusively restricts consideration to the final version of the IEP that the school system offered during the IEP process.²⁴⁰ Various circuits have adopted it but typically only in limited circumstances or with exceptions.²⁴¹

II-110. May the party that requested the hearing generally raise issues not in the complaint?

No,²⁴³ unless the other either party agrees²⁴⁴ or—at least in the Second Circuit—“open[s] the door” (e.g., via its opening statement or via its questioning of witnesses).²⁴⁵ Clarifying that “the waiver rule is not to be mechanically applied,” the Second Circuit has explained that “[t]he key ... is fair notice and preventing parents from ‘sandbag[ging] the school district’ by raising claims after the expiration of the resolution period.”²⁴⁶ In a subsequent decision, a federal district court in New York concluded that the parent had provided fair notice of the issue of methodology via a general reference in the complaint to the lack of sufficient progress in a similar program.²⁴⁷ Reaching a similar result as the Second Circuit’s exceptions, the Ninth Circuit found applicable to IDEA hearings the federal evidentiary rule that treats issues as raised in the complaint if tried by express or implied consent.²⁴⁸

II-111. May the complaining party raise additional issues specifically via a reservation of rights provision in their complaint?

No, according to a published federal court decision in New York.²⁴⁹

II-112. May the other (i.e., noncomplaining) party raise issues not in the complaint?

The regulations do not address this question, but the accompanying commentary takes the position that the answer is a matter of state procedures and, in their absence, the IHO's discretion.²⁵⁰

II-113. Does an IHO have authority to proceed with the hearing in the absence of a party?

In general, courts review such matters on an abuse of discretion standard, which makes it advisable for the IHO to provide and document due notice to the non-appearing party and ample opportunity for rescheduling participation. Thus, it would appear to be in effect a last resort within the need for a prompt decision. In applying these limited circumstances, courts have upheld the IHO in the clear majority of cases.²⁵¹

II-114. May an IHO order the independent evaluation of the child? If so, who is responsible for payment of the evaluator, and are there any limits to the cost and qualifications?

The IDEA regulations make clear that if the IHO orders the evaluation it is at public expense (i.e., the district is responsible for payment).²⁵² The courts have recognized that this regulation provides the underlying authority for such an order,²⁵³ including its use for providing an expert assessment for determining a compensatory education award per the qualitative approach.²⁵⁴ The cost and qualifications limits are those that apply to the district's use of evaluators.²⁵⁵ However, an order for a trial period as the evaluation poses other limits,²⁵⁶ and the issue of an IEE at public expense is also distinguishable.²⁵⁷

Not according to OSEP.²⁵⁸

II-116. What is the outer boundary of a parent's right in terms of having individuals, including members of the press, attend hearing that they have chosen to be closed?

According to OSEP, the outer limit is for "individuals who have some direct relationship to the parties and/or a personal need to understand the conduct of proceedings generally," thus not extending to members of the press.²⁵⁹ OSEP also added the reminder that an IHO may "remove any individual in attendance whose behavior is disruptive or otherwise interferes with conducting a fair and impartial hearing."²⁶⁰

II-117. Do school employees, whom the parent has not invited, have the right to attend a closed hearing?

No, according to OSEP, unless (1) the parents have provided consent, (2) the IDEA regulations authorize their attendance, or they meet the FERPA exception for "legitimate educational interests."²⁶¹ OSEP also emphasized that in such matters, the IHO "is in the best position to ensure that the confidentiality of personally identifiable information is properly protected and that standard legal practice is followed in the due process hearing."²⁶²

II-118. Is opposing counsel entitled to a copy of an expert's notes for cross-examination if the expert uses the notes on direct examination?

Yes, according to an unpublished decision in New Hampshire, but the court relied in part on the state-adopted Federal Rules of Evidence.²⁶³

II-119. Does attorney-client privilege apply to lay advocates in impartial hearings under the IDEA?

It depends on state law. For example, a federal magistrate concluded that New Jersey law implied an affirmative answer for impartial hearings under the IDEA.²⁶⁴

II-120. In a compensatory education or tuition reimbursement case, does the IHO have the discretionary authority to bifurcate the hearing so that the remedial issue is reserved for a second stage depending on the outcome of the FAPE issue?

This matter is largely unsettled. With very limited exception,²⁶⁵ state laws do not address this question. Similarly, the directly applicable case law provides qualified but limited support.²⁶⁶ Arguably, this procedure, if exercised prudently, fulfills the IDEA purpose of efficient hearings. Moreover, if the parties agree to the procedure and cooperate in its prompt completion, its practical utility and legal defensibility would seem to be high.

II-121. May an IHO (a) rely in part on unsworn statements of a party during the prehearing conference and (b) consider sworn testimony of the parent showing a bias for parochial schools?

According to a recent First Circuit Court of Appeals decision, the answers are (a) yes, and (b) maybe. More specifically, the court respectively (a) rejected the application of the Federal Rules of

III. DECISION ISSUES

A. Decisional Factors

III-1. What is the role of medical, psychological, and educational diagnoses that are not listed in the IDEA classifications for eligibility?

Such diagnoses may provide a supplementary role, but they are not generally necessary; in cases of conflict in definitions or criteria, the IDEA specifications are controlling.²⁶⁸

III-2. Is the "educational performance" component of the eligibility definition limited to the academic, as compared with the social, dimension?

The two major appellate decisions are split on this interpretational issue.²⁶⁹

III-3. Are any of the procedural violations of the IDEA a per se denial of FAPE?

The only seeming possibility, depending on the interpretation of the relevant IDEA language, is where the proof is preponderant that the district "[s]ignificantly impeded the parent's opportunity to participate in the decision-making process regarding the provision of a FAPE to the parent's child."²⁷⁰

III-4. Has the Rowley floor-based substantive standard for denial of FAPE changed?

Yes.²⁷¹

III-5. What is the prevailing standard for FAPE implementation cases?

Rather than 100% compliance, the leading judicial standards are (1) failure to implement a material, i.e., substantial or significant, portion of the IEP, and (2) the same material failure plus the lack of benefit.²⁷²

III-6. Do an IHO's minor corrections of the transcript constitute per se reversible error with respect to his or her decision?

No.²⁷³

III-7. Would the verbatim adoption of all of either party's proposed findings of facts undermine the traditional deference to the IHO's findings and presumption of impartiality?

It certainly could do so.²⁷⁴

III-8. Who has the burden of persuasion at the hearing stage?

²⁷⁰ Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, 20 U.S.C. § 1415(f)(3)(E) (2018); OSERS Assistance to States for the Education of Children with Disabilities, 34 C.F.R. § 300.513(a)(2) (2018).

²⁷² Compare Van Duyn ex rel. Van Duyn v. Baker Sch. Dist. 5J, 502 F.3d 811 (9th Cir. 2007) (materiality alone), with Hous. Indep. Sch. Dist. v. Bobby R., 200 F.3d 341 (5th Cir. 2000) (materiality/benefit). For a detailed analysis, see Perry A. Zirkel & Edward T. Bauer, The Third Dimension of FAPE under the IDEA: IEP Implementation, 36 J. NAT'L ASS'N ADMIN. L. JUDICIARY 409 (2016).

²⁷³ E.g., Paschl v. Sch. Bd., 453 F.3d 1064 (8th Cir. 2008) (ruling that IHO's corrections to the transcript were, if error, harmless).

²⁷⁴ E.g., Larson v. Indep. Sch. Dist. No. 316, 39 IDELR ¶ 66 (D. Minn. 2004).

For FAPE cases, the Supreme Court held that under the IDEA, which is silent on this point, the burden of persuasion is on the challenging party, i.e., the parent.²⁷⁵ However, some state laws have put the burden of proof in such cases on the district.²⁷⁶ Conversely, lower courts have extended the Supreme Court's ruling to other issues, such as whether the child is eligible²⁷⁷ and whether the child's placement is in the least restrictive environment (LRE).²⁷⁸

III-9. What is the standard, or quantum, of proof at the hearing stage?

Presumably it is the general civil standard of preponderance of the evidence, as derived from the judicial review stage.²⁷⁹

III-10. Does an IHO have authority to grant res judicata or collateral estoppel effect to a previous IHO decision?

Yes.²⁸⁰

III-11. Does an IHO's FAPE or placement decision for one academic year have a binding effect, via res judicata or collateral estoppel, on FAPE or placement for the next academic year?

No, according to the Ninth Circuit; each school year represents a separate issue.²⁸¹

III-12. May an IHO remand a case to the district for further action or information rather than deciding the case?

No, such action would violate the IDEA's imperative for a timely final decision.²⁸²

B. Writing Features

III-13. Does the IHO have the discretion to restate the issue(s) of the case?

Yes, within reasonable limits, based on the IHO's consideration of the parties' arguments.²⁸³

III-14. May IHOs comment in the written decision about attorney conduct at the hearing?

OSEP has indirectly addressed this issue by opining that a state law that expressly allows such comments is not contrary to the IDEA provided that the comment is 1) linked to a relevant issue (e.g., a complaint perceived to be frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation) and 2) does not preclude a party's ability to address such comments in court or in any application for attorneys' fees.²⁸⁴

III-15. Do the IHO's legal findings need support in the record?

Yes. Without such support, a court may conclude that the findings were arbitrary and capricious.²⁸⁵ Conversely, where the IHO's legal findings are supported in the record, courts generally afford them notable deference.²⁸⁶ In general, the deference increases where the IHO's factual findings are careful and thorough.²⁸⁷ Moreover, given the grey area of mixed questions of fact and law, the boundary between factual findings and legal conclusions under the IDEA does not amount to a bright line. For example, in the Fourth Circuit at least, the appropriateness of an IEP is a question of fact.²⁸⁸ Finally, some state laws expressly require cited support from the record.²⁸⁹

III-16. Does the IHO have to limit the factual findings in the written decision to those essential for the legal conclusions?

Although it may be appropriate practice, as a matter of efficiency, to do so, there is no such legal requirement; i.e., it is not reversible error to include additional facts.²⁹⁰

III-17. Do IHOs have similar qualified discretion with regard to their legal conclusions?

Yes, except to the extent that some state laws have specified requirements for the legal conclusions.²⁹¹ For example, writing shortcuts, such as cutting and pasting a selected group of conclusions from another decision, are not legal error if well founded.²⁹² Conversely, however, an IHO's legal conclusion that fails to reference the supporting facts may not receive judicial deference.²⁹³ For example, a federal court vacated and remanded a hearing officer's decision that "lack[ed] sufficiently detailed reasoning" (which in this case overlapped with insufficiently explained fact-finding).²⁹⁴

III-18. Is it appropriate for an IHO to use the term “mental retardation” in a written decision referring to a child with this classification?

No. On October 5, 2010, the President Obama signed legislation that changes the use of “mental retardation” in the IDEA and other federal legislation and regulations to “intellectual disability.”²⁹⁵

III-19. Do IHO remedial orders need to have a specific evidentiary foundation?

Yes, but the reversals on this basis are relatively infrequent and more a matter of the underlying substance than the quality of the writing.²⁹⁶

III-20. Are IHOs allowed to amend their decisions for technical errors?

Yes, within the boundaries specified in some state laws²⁹⁷ and to the extent that OSEP leaves the matter to the discretion of SEAs and IHOs, provided that both parties receive proper notice.²⁹⁸ Such corrections may be either sua sponte or, when it does not change the substance or outcome of the decision, at the request of either party.²⁹⁹

III-21. Must IHOs redact their written decisions to avoid information that is not personally identifiable to the student(s)?

This issue is reserved to state law and policy, but OSEP has clarified that the SEA is ultimately responsible for redacting, before public dissemination of the decision, “any personal characteristics or other information that would make it possible to identify the student who is the subject of the written decision with reasonable certainty or make the student’s identity easily traceable.”³⁰⁰ This redaction does not extend to the IHO’s name, the district’s name, or the case number unless it would result in personally identifiable information to the student(s).³⁰¹

III-22. Do IHO decisions have a precedential effect on other IHO decisions within the state?

No, not as binding authority. However, as California law makes explicit,³⁰² it is generally understood that IHOs have the discretion to cite these decisions as persuasive.

IV-1. Does a noncustodial parent have standing to file for a due process hearing?

Yes, according to the Seventh Circuit, unless (a) unless the divorce decree expressly eliminates all rights in educational matters or (b) the custodial parent's exercise of the decreed rights trumps this right.³⁰³ However, the hearing right is limited to the noncustodial parent's rights, such as records access and meeting notices, not the child's rights, such as FAPE.³⁰⁴

IV-2. May IHOs hold the hearing ex parte?

Yes, if the IHO provided reasonable notice and opportunity for the missing party's appearance. Courts will generally review such matters on an abuse of discretion standard, with due attention to the specific circumstances and apply applicable state laws.³⁰⁵

IV-3. What is the standard of judicial review for an IHO's decision?

The lower courts have varied in their interpretation and application of the Supreme Court's "due weight"³⁰⁶ standard.³⁰⁷ However, the general theme is to provide (1) presumptive deference to the IHO's factual findings, particularly for the credibility of witnesses, and (2) de novo review for the IHO's legal conclusions.³⁰⁸ The deference for factual findings tends to be less for those that are based on additional evidence³⁰⁹ and more for those that are careful and thorough.³¹⁰

Overall, the party challenging an IHO's decision faces a steep "uphill climb."³¹¹

IV-4. Does an IHO have authority to confer consent decree status on a settlement agreement?

The likely answer is "in limited circumstances," although the case law is not sufficiently on point for a more definitive answer. More specifically, the court decisions concerning whether the parent is entitled to attorneys' fees as the prevailing party of a consent decree are indirectly applicable and have varying limits.³¹² A few states prohibit hearing officers from using the settlement agreement as their decision.³¹³

IV-5. May lay advocates represent parents at due process hearings?

It depends primarily on state law. In survey data published in 2007, 10 states prohibited their representation, and 12 permitted it.³¹⁴ A more recent and direct canvassing of state laws found 7 states that expressly permitted it.³¹⁵ In other states, the decision is within the IHO's discretion, with some IHOs not allowing it as the unauthorized practice of law.³¹⁶

IV-6. When lay advocates represent parents at due process hearings, are their communications privileged at subsequent judicial proceedings to the same extent as under the attorney-client privilege?

Yes, according to a published federal magistrate's decision in New Jersey.³¹⁷

IV-7. May an IHO reconsider a decision upon the request of either party or both parties?

Only if (1) the state's applicable procedures allow it,³¹⁸ and (2) the reconsideration is before the final decision and is issued within the forty-five-day, or properly extended timeline.³¹⁹

IV-8. May an IHO clarify the decision upon the request of either or both parties?

IV-9. Does an IHO have the authority to retain jurisdiction sua sponte after issuance of the decision?

No, according to the limited case law due to the finality requirement for IHO decisions.³²²

IV-10. Do parents have the right to place under seal the transcript and exhibits of an open due process hearing for which the redacted IHO decision is available on the SEA website?

Yes, according to an unpublished decision in Ohio, in which the court relied on FERPA and the child's right to privacy.³²³

IV-11. Does the IDEA permit interlocutory appeals of IHO prehearing orders or interim rulings (e.g., partial dismissal) to court?

No, according to various courts.³²⁴

IV-12. In a tuition reimbursement case, does the IDEA require payment during the stay-put period?

Not necessarily, according to OSEP. It is a state law matter, subject to

IHO and court interpretation.³²⁵ However, various courts have interpreted stay-put to apply to an IHO's—or, in a two-tier state, a review officer's—decision that orders tuition reimbursement.³²⁶

IV-13. May a school district delay in implementing an IHO's remedial order in favor of the parent prior to expiration of the period for appeal?

It depends, according to OSEP. The threshold criteria are whether (1) state law allows it, and (2) the state's appeal period is reasonable.³²⁷ However, the ultimate criterion is what is a "reasonable period of time" in the particular case, which is a factual matter based on various factors that include the timing of the district's appeal and the nature of the IHO-ordered relief.³²⁸

IV-14. Do IHOs have authority to enter a contingent final order?

Yes, in limited circumstances, according to a federal district court case.³²⁹ As the second step of its analysis, the court concluded that the IHO did not abuse her discretion in conditionally dismissing the parent's case with prejudice if she did not file a new complaint within thirty days.³³⁰

IV-15. Do IHOs have a constitutional right to a hearing upon their termination?

No, according to the limited case law authority where the IHO received notice of the findings and an opportunity to reply in writing

under the applicable state law.³³¹

IV-16. Is an IHO's prehearing order appealable to court?

No, according to the Ninth Circuit.³³² The court reasoned that the principles underlying the "final judgment rule"—the promotion of judicial efficiency and the avoidance of multiple lawsuits—also applied to reviews of IHO decisions under the IDEA.³³³

IV-17. Do the two specifically authorized IHO remedies for disciplinary changes in placement at 34 C.F.R. § 300.432(b)(2) preclude additional or alternative remedies in such cases?

No, according to OSEP.³³⁴ In some of these expedited cases, OSEP offered compensatory education as an example of a permissible remedy.³³⁵

IV-18. Does an IHO have authority to order a district to comply with a violated procedural requirement even if the violation does not amount to a denial of FAPE?

Yes, just as long the order is limited to ordering prospective procedural compliance.³³⁶

IV-19. To resolve the issue of res judicata or collateral estoppel, may a SEA assign a case to the same IHO who adjudicated a prior case with the same parties?

Yes, according to OSEP.³³⁷

IV-20. Must the SEA make IHO decisions available to the public? If so, for how long?

Yes.³³⁸ OSEP has added that this availability should be FERPA-required redaction.³³⁹ The agency clarified that the required redaction includes information that (a) would make the student identifiable with reasonable certainty, or (b) would “make the student’s identity easily traceable if disclosed to the school’s community or the community at large.”³⁴⁰

For the period, OSEP stated: “We view [a] five and a half year[] time period as the most reasonable minimum time period during which States must make due process and State-level review findings and decisions available to the public under [the IDEA regulations].”³⁴¹

IV-21. Do the provisions of a state hearing officer manual have the force of law?

Generally not, unless the state has issued it via the applicable rule-making process.³⁴²

IV-22. After a parent files a complaint for investigation under the SEA’s complaint procedures process, may a district file for a due process hearing on the same issue(s) so as to trigger the IDEA regulations’ mandatory deferral?

Yes, although OSEP strongly encouraged districts not to do so, instead recommending mediation or other informal dispute resolution procedures.³⁴³ OSEP's rationale was as follows:

Public agencies that seek to force parents who have already exercised their right to file a State complaint into a potentially more adversarial due process hearing harm the "cooperative process" that should be the goal of all stakeholders. Moreover, diverting resources into adversarial processes between parents and public agencies is contrary to Congressional intent in the 2004 amendments to IDEA's dispute resolution procedures to give parents and schools expanded opportunities to resolve their disagreements in positive and constructive ways.³⁴⁴

IV-23. What should the IHO do if the parents file for a hearing after closure of the charter school that their child attended?

First, the answer depends on the status of the charter school under state law, with the two primary but not exclusive categories being the charter school as a LEA or being part of an LEA.³⁴⁵ If the charter school is part of an LEA, the LEA is the proper party (unless state law assigns responsibility to another public entity).³⁴⁶ However, if the school is an LEA, the SEA would appear to have the ultimate obligation in the matter,³⁴⁷ and the IHO's actions will depend on whether the parents file against the SEA as an additional or alternative party.³⁴⁸ If not, the IHO faces the difficulty of a charter school defendant who may not appear or, upon appearing, may claim

IV-24. Do IHOs have the authority to award attorneys' fees?

No. Neither the IDEA nor any corollary state law provides for this authority, although two states require IHOs to designate the prevailing party on an issue-by-issue basis.³⁵⁰ In the absence of the requisite statutory basis, IHOs lack this authority.³⁵¹

IV-25. Is there any case law about the employment security of IHOs?

The case law is limited, and although the expectation of continued employment varies widely per individual contract arrangements and applicable state law, the outcomes trend thus far has not been favorable to IHOs.³⁵²

IV-26. Is it permissible to use IDEA funds for due process hearings?

Yes, according to OSEP within applicable limits.³⁵³
